Tourism has huge impacts on climate change, and is hugely affected by it too. The industry should Declare a #ClimateEmergency and transform its current extractive model into one that supports resilient communities and regenerates biodiversity. RT if you agree. Follow for more.

Tourism Declares a Climate Emergency

2020

We're a global community of 426 tourism organisations, companies and professionals, all committed to delivering a Climate Action Plan aligned with the need to cut emissions in half by 2030.

At COP26, together with the UNWTO, UNEP, VisitScotland and the Travel Foundation, we're launching The Glasgow Declaration for a Decade of Tourism Climate Action to scale these commitments to our entire sector.

We urge every organisation in tourism to make the same commitment.

A wide-angle photograph of a modern, multi-level atrium. The space is characterized by its high ceilings, large wooden pillars, and a prominent indoor garden area with various trees and plants. A wide, dark staircase with a glass railing leads from the upper level down to the main floor. People are seen walking and sitting throughout the space, which is illuminated by a combination of recessed ceiling lights and hanging pendant lights. The overall atmosphere is bright and open.
